

Bank Rakyat Indonesia (BBRI IJ)

FUNDAMENTAL VIEW ¹

As of 26 Oct 2023

- Bank Rakyat Indonesia (BRI) is rated Baa2 (sta)/ BBB- (sta)/ BBB (sta). As the second largest bank in Indonesia that is majority-owned (53.19%) by the Indonesian government, and key role in servicing the ultra-micro and micro segments, we expect a very high likelihood of government support in times of need.
- BRI's credit strength has been its very high margins (>7%; rose after consolidating Pegadaian and PNM) and consequently, ROE, as well as capital buffers (>20% CET 1 ratio), which are ahead of its country peers and among the highest in APAC.
- The bank has a leading franchise in the country's micro and small commercial segments with a long operating track record. Well managed credit costs have in turn helped to support its high margins.

RISKS & CATALYSTS

As of 26 Oct 2023

- BRI's high exposure to ultra-micro and micro (~47% of loans) and small commercial loans (18%) leads to higher credit costs compared to its peers. Asset quality within the COVID restructured book (mainly small and micro loans) has not trended as well as the bank's earlier guidance, but the higher margins generated continue to provide more than sufficient room for credit costs to be absorbed. We are comfortable with the credit given its very high capital buffers.
- BRI's interest margins have been resilient thanks to its increased focus on the higher yielding micro segment so its returns have continued to be strong. It is on track to exceed its FY23 NIM guidance.
- The Indonesian economy continues to be on good recovery momentum and is set to receive a boost from election related spending in 2H23, which should help to keep general asset quality and credit costs in check, as well as aid loan growth, which has been impacted by tight liquidity conditions in the first half.
