

United Overseas Bank (UOB SP)

FUNDAMENTAL VIEW ¹

As of 15 May 2025

- UOB has strong stand-alone credit profile and benefits from the high likelihood of support from the government of Singapore, where it is one of the three major local banks.
- The bank is more focused on Singapore and Southeast Asia than on Greater China; its traditional strengths are the SME and retail sectors, although its large corporate book is now over 60% of loans.
- UOB has been conservatively managed with a sound risk profile, a strong focus on liquidity and a long track record of relatively good performance.

RISKS & CATALYSTS

As of 15 May 2025

- UOB has a greater focus on Southeast Asia than its Singapore bank peers, which leaves it open to more asset quality risk in a downturn / high interest rate environment.
- The bank has benefited more from the final Basel III rules implementation than its peers - its CET 1 ratio was previously the lowest among the three but now aligns with peers.
- Its NPL coverage ratio of 90% is around 50-70 ppt behind peers. However, both collateral and UOB's SGD 2.8 bn in general provisions will be more than sufficient.
